Nomos Hotel, Italy

Rome itself helped inform the design of Nomos Hotel, housed in a former 18th-century Franciscan monastery in the city's Regola neighbourhood. Henry Timi restored the property under the guidance of architect Angelo Zampolini, including bringing the courtyard fountain back to life, and looked to the historic beauty of the Eternal City to dress the 31 rooms. Classic travertine, timber and linen sit against an austere palette of clay, beige and greige, blending with the patina of the building and showcasing Henry Timi's signature "material minimalist" style. The sober design continues in the bar and restaurant, while underground there's a collection of relaxation and fitness rooms.
